WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

The upper level disturbance that produced more than 1000 lightning strikes in the region on Sunday has not fully moved out of the area, and some residual mid and upper level moisture remains overhead. Drier and hotter weather will prevail through Wednesday. The marine layer will be shallow and confined to the immediate coast. Areas outside of the marine layer will be 7-12 degrees warmer than normal. Typical summer slope and sea breeze winds will prevail.

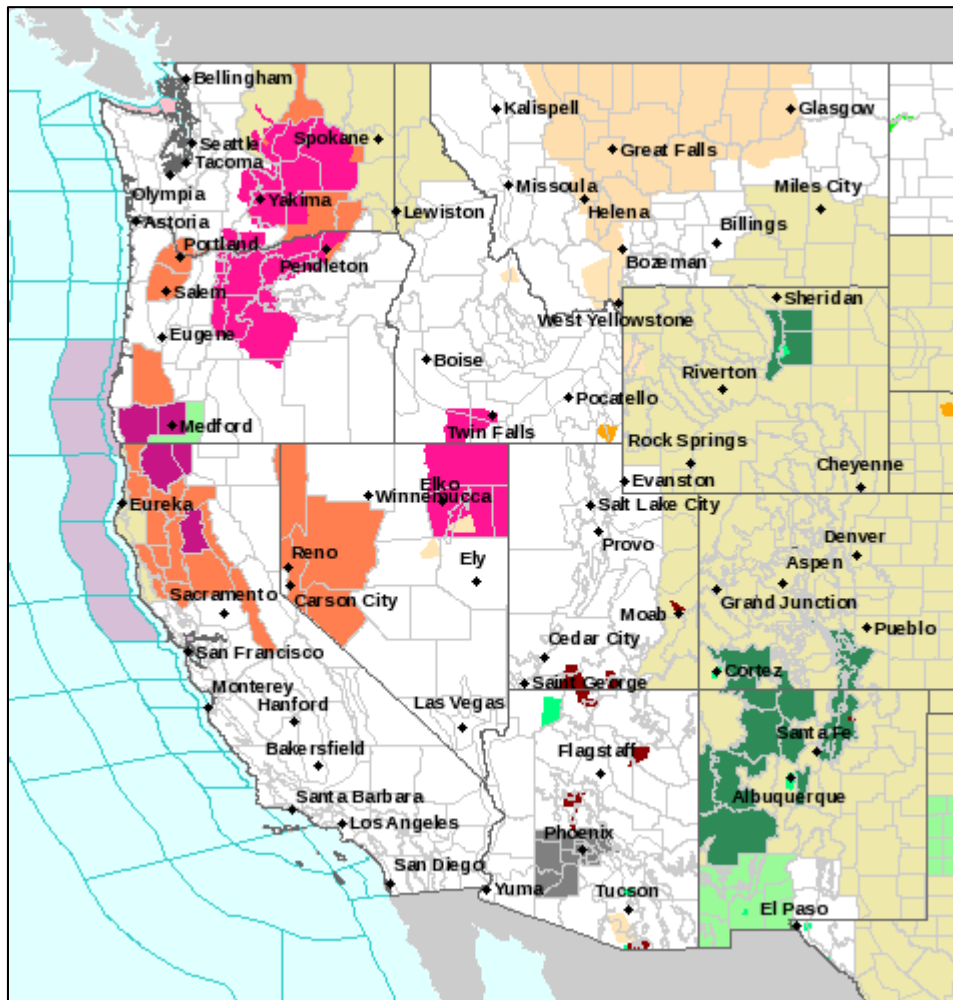

The strong high pressure center will relocate to the 4 Corners area and the Great Basin. Isolated thunderstorms may reach as far north as the Lake Tahoe region Thursday afternoon. More showers and thunderstorms are possible in our eastern areas Friday and Saturday, followed by dry and warmer weather beginning Sunday.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

Scattered wet afternoon thunderstorms mainly over the mountains and deserts Tuesday through Saturday

East to southeast flow aloft will bring scattered showers and thunderstorms to the mountains and deserts Tuesday through Saturday as the high pressure area moves eastward to the Four Corners Area. A disturbance in the flow may cause some shower and thunderstorm activity to move into the coastal and valley areas of Southern California Tuesday through Thursday. The coastal and valley areas of Central California may see some shower and thunderstorm activity Wednesday and Thursday. The disturbance will move out into the Pacific Ocean by Friday ending the shower and thunderstorm threat for the coastal and valley locations. Temperatures will be near to a little above normal through Saturday, with 80s to low 90s across the mountains and 90s to 102 in the valleys. Minimum humidity will be mainly between 20% and 40% through Saturday, except there will be teens across the Central Coast through Tuesday. The high pressure will move westward and the flow aloft will become southwest which will end the shower and thunderstorm threat over the entire region Sunday through early next week. Temperatures will warm and humidity will become low across the region Sunday through early next week. Winds will be light through early next week, except there will be strong downdraft winds associated with thunderstorm activity.
